

CSI

of St. Louis, Inc.

CSI of St. Louis, Inc. has been servicing clients in both its Camera Repair and Telecommunications divisions for more than 40 years. Formerly a division of CPI Corp., the company was purchased in 1985 by Lee Beck and has been family-owned ever since. Today, Rick Beck serves as the company's president, Dan Fleck, co-owner and vice-president, continue CSI's longtime commitment to exceptional customer service.

CSI offers the only in-house camera repair in St. Louis and provides in-house sensor cleaning for digital cameras. Factory-trained technicians have been with the company for more than 35 years and are able to service most camera models, and CSI is a warranty dealer for Canon. One-on-one customer orientation, free estimates, Internet quotes, fast turnaround and a 6-month warranty on all repairs are standard.

CSI also is an experienced telecommunications provider, offering telephone and voice processing systems and voice and data networks. CSI is one of the largest authorized and trained Panasonic and Iwatsu teleconnect dealers in the area, offering telephone systems for small business and residential customers alike. As a business owner himself, Beck understands that communication is critical to the success of every business and employs a staff of experienced technicians who are committed to getting each client's business up and running again as quickly and as seamlessly as possible.

Located in Clayton for many years, CSI relocated in May 2008 to Chesterfield. Beck looks forward to continuing his company's success and to expanding his business, particularly in the area of in-house camera repair.
