

The Ballwin campus of Xenon International Academy is one of six nationwide. The beauty school is dedicated to quality education and is one of the premier schools in the U.S. Offering the best technical and practical cosmetology education available, from faculty to products to services, Xenon demands excellence.

“We work with our students from graduation to the beginning of their careers by assisting with job placement,” said Kim McIntosh, executive director. “Our graduates work in all areas of the beauty business, from salon owner, stylist, esthetician, platform artist, and more.”

Students are exposed to all services offered in salons/spas and are prepared for the working world with classroom curriculum and hands-on experience in the academy’s salon/spa. The public always receives reduced-price services. The students are trained in hair, skin, and nail services under the direct supervision of licensed instructors. “Michael Burgess of Michael Isaiah Designs for Hair, a leading salon in Manchester, is on our staff,” McIntosh said. “He teaches the most advanced and creative hair cutting and sculpture. After 10 weeks of core training, students are eligible to sign up for his classes.”

Xenon is a member of Pivot Point, the world leader in hair and beauty education systems, teaching the science behind the art. It also is a partner of Peel’s Salon Services, a large distributors of salon products in the Midwest, providing networking opportunities and placement advantages for graduates.

“Many salon owners prefer Xenon graduates because they are prepared for the real world,” McIntosh said. “They are trained for success.”
